N. B. KLAINE, Editor and Publisher.

The coal miners at Trinidad are still on a strike and as a consequence coal is a scarce article.

There is one redeeming feature about Mormonism. That faith does not throw the support of a husband on one woman.

A certain gentleman must have been very proud of his wife, when he described her to a friend recently, as "beautiful, dutiful, youthful, and an armful."

The body of a man, a miner named T. W. Waters, was found hanging to a tree on the Eagle river, not far from Aspen, in Gunnison county. On his back was the inscription, written on a piece of bark, "This man hung for stealing horses."

President Tenney, of the college at Colorado Springs, ascended with several professors and students a hitherto unnamed peak near Colorado Springs and with appropriate religious ceremonies named it Mount Garfield.

Divorce in the west has been put to many uses. It was left for an Ohio woman to find in it a new way to pay old debt. Owing a man $320, she cancelled the obligation by marrying him and immediately got a divorce for $60, leaving a clear gain of $160.

Twenty million dollars are the figures for the cattle industry in Colorado. The Prairie Cattle company, with which the late Earl of Airle was connected, had a capital of $3,000,000 to put into cattle, and are operating in Colorado and partly in New Mexico.

The department has issued instructions to postmasters to forward re-addressed letters as often as requisite for delivery without re-payment of postage, as has heretofore been required. In other words if a letter is properly stamped when originally mailed, it must follow the party to whom addressed until delivered? if its forwarding is asked.

With a reduction of the public debt during September of $17,483,611, a month filled with such startling events that any other government but our own would have been shaken from its foundation, and with the balance of trade increasing in our favor, the country still feels that it is safe in the hands of the Republican party.

The impending trial of assassin Guiteau if likely to present to the country in conspicuous manner the hollow character of our jury system. Under the constitution and the laws, the wretch is guaranteed a trial by jury. This jury must be an impartial one. The standards set up to determine the qualifications of jurors require men who shall have formed no settled opinion or prejudice as to the case. Nowhere in all this broad land can such a jury be found? Imagine, if you can, an attorney asking candidates for seats in the jury box the usual questions: Have you read the papers? Have you formed an opinion as to Guiteau's guilt or innocence? etc. If twelve men could be found who had not formed a very proper opinion of disgust and detestation for the fiend, they would certainly be so deficient in intelligence as to render them unfit to try the case. Suppose, also, that Guiteau should ask a change of venue to a community where he could have some assurance that through freedom from prejudice he would be accorded a fair and impartial hearing, where, in the wide world, could he go? So, it seems that, after all, while the forms of law may be observed, at best Guiteau's trial must prove to be a travesty. He will, and he should be, hanged. But we shall learn through his conviction how foolish and how wicked are many of the barriers which we have set up against the legal punishment of criminals.

Fifteen million dollars are in the United States Treasury upon which interest has ceased, and for which the owners do not think it worth while to call.

One of the highest tributes (although paid unconsciously) ever paid to the Irish race was the recent declaration by a Mormon Bishop that there are no Irishmen or women among the Mormons.
